Today's general counsel must have the ability to manage emerging risks at the intersection of business law, corporate strategy and stakeholder relations. The urgency for change, innovation and transformation has reached unprecedented levels for most organizations. The global pandemic, digitization, climate change, social justice, geo-politics and heightened stakeholder scrutiny are just some of the accelerators of change that are pushing governance to the forefront. To ensure a seat at the executive table today, General Counsel must be capable of stepping up to the opportunity to go beyond the law and help drive transformational change across the organization for tomorrow.

This interactive workshop will explore the skills and competencies required to step up in this new paradigm and ensure your seat at the table.
