

CRISIS LEADERSHIP – MOVING FROM REACTION TO RESPONSE

Facilitated by: H  l  ne Deschamps Marquis, Nasim Ghasemi, Deloitte Legal, Shannon Parker, Deloitte

The role of the General Counsel is critical during times of crisis, where navigating the risks, impacts, and challenges of reacting vs responding can directly affect results. This session will explore the essential competencies required of General Counsel leaders when managing a crisis response.

We will discuss the importance of strategic thinking, decision-making and communication during times of uncertainty. Additionally, we will explore the role of adaptability and agility and how your approach needs to evolve while staying focused on organizational goals. Managing teams, stakeholders and relationships is more challenging when facing crisis which often requires extra care and attention. Through case studies and real-world examples, we will examine how successful General Counsel leaders have applied these competencies to effectively lead their organizations through crises.

Attendees will leave with actionable insights and strategies for enhancing their own crisis leadership capabilities.
